WHEN TO FRESHEN

THE DAIRY COWS To have good producers in the winter time, cows should freshen in the fall. October or November is a good time for cows to drop calves, and to do this they must be bred in January or early Febru-ary. Even though dairy cows freshen in the fell of the warr they will are the fall of the year, they will not prove good producers unless they are given proper shelter, plenty of feed and other necessary care and attention. No animal responds more quickly to good treat-ment. Cows that become fresh in fall and produce well in winter may be turned out on pasture in the spring at a time when the milk flow begins to decline. The succulent feed and exercise in the pasture will stimulate the yield and help the cows increase in flesh. At the same time the calf may be carried through the winter on skimmed milk and when spring comes the pasture will enable it to make good

CHICKEN LICE.

There have been many advocates of the theory that chicken lice can be killed by painting the roosts and dropping boards or the whole interior of the poultry house with various oil mixtures, the idea being that the vapors or gases arising from these points penetrate the feathers of the roosting fowls and kill the lice. This method has been given a very extensive crial and not one of the 42 different

TACTFUL HANDLING

OF THE SEUNES Few persons have seriously considered establishing friendly relations with a skunk. It has been done in some cases under the miss-prehension that the ani-mal was a cat, and the results have been mai was a cat, and the results have been unpleasant. But the biological survey of the United States department of agriculture has investigated the skunk and found him to be the best wild-animal friend the farmer has.

Almost any farmer might have two or three deep skunks and state of the deep skunks and state of the deep skunks are might have two or three deep skunks are stated.

three dozen skunks at work for him destroying mice, grasshoppera, crickets and white grubs, and furnishing him from $50 to $100 worth of fur a year. All that is necessary is that he respect their dens, keep his poultry in skunk-proof yards, kill an old horse for them every fall, and he testful when he meets than be tactful when he meets them in the evening. There is a marked depression of the fur market at present, but recovery to normal is anticipated. It has been estimated that a year's getch of skunks in New York state is worth $1,000,000. Only one-fifth of them are black or short striped. If all were of this higher grade, they would be worth $3,000,000. The department suggests that a preserve stocked with black about. a preserve stocked with black skunks would eventually, double or treble the catch of skunks in the territory surround-ing it.

MANAGEMENT OF GEESE.

Goose raising is not so extensively engaged in as duck raising, the conditions under which they can be successfully raised being almost entirely different from those necessary for successful duck raising. The duck, being smaller, can be raised in a more limited space than can the goose, the latter needing free range and water, while the former has been proved to do well without water.

While the goose cannot profitably be raised in as large numbers as the duck, still it cannot justly be termed unprofitable. There are many places on a farm that are worthless for cultivation that could be utilized with excellent results for goose raising. Fields that streams, branches or unused springs on them could be turned to good advantage by making them into goose pastures. Many farmers are profiting by this and adding to their

In these experiments the roosts and dropping boards or the whole interior of the house were thoroughly painted or sprayed just before the fowls went to roost, and all doors, windows and vent tilators were closed during the first night. Five badly infested fowls were used in each test, and at the end of one week examination was made for living lice.

somel of the general assembly, which is to convene Jan. 5, covers about 70 trades, professions and occupations, only two of the legislators having indicated that they had no occupation whatever. These are two of the five women members of the house, while the other three women leg-islators are a graphologist, housewife and minister respectively. There are 85 farmers in the legislature, 32 merchants, 18 manufacturers and 17 confess that they are "retired" from business cares. The other occupations, trades and pro-
